Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing this letter to express my interest in the position of the front-end developer role. I strongly believe that my hands-on experience in e-commerce and my competency in front end languages is an ideal match to the job requirements and will bring success for both.

First of all, I would like to express that I am a very dedicated learner. During my study of IT diploma, to be a standout in class, I put my 100% to my study which ended up 6.875 GPA and my assignment was selected as a model answer by a lecturer. Considering that I started my study all from scratch without any IT background and most of the students were already competent in programming languages, my accomplishments made me so confident and strong to face such challenges.

Also, during the semester, I carried out a role as a leader for several team projects. My goal as a leader, which has always been my first priority, was understanding each member's strength and skills, and lead them to max out their performances on their confident parts, resulting in sound achievement and top grades for them as well as myself at the end of the day. For my successful achievement in the team leading role, I believe that my previous experience as a hall manager contributed to my work philosophy for team play, and co-operation.

Taking a first step as a front-end developer is a new challenge for me, but as always, I am confident to make it happen, and I cannot wait to become an experienced lead full-stack developer at the end, which is my ultimate career goal.

Sincerely,

Sumi Han
